

OmniTone release:

Sleep Won't Come

John McNeil - trumpet
Jeff Jenkins - piano
Kent McLagan - bass

A beautiful new album from trumpeter, composer and part-time insomniac John McNeil. His musical portrayals of lying-awake-at-4AM-staring-at-nothing scenes range from graceful melodic statements to percussive tone-cluster compositions and include both pensive and demented moments.

Joined by pianist Jeff Jenkins, a New York 1980's new music ex-pat now living in Denver, and Mile High-area bassist Kent McLagan, this album is John's most adventurous, yet it retains the musicality, virtuosity and humor John is known for worldwide.

What the critics are saying about "Sleep Won't Come":

"Mr. McNeil has a wicked, almost relentless sense of humor as he takes the listener through a sleepless night in "Sleep Won't Come."

- allaboutjazz.com

"Sleep Won't Come" (my pick for album title of the year) sounds like the album Chet Baker and George Russell might have made..."

-jazzreview.com

"...the music on "Sleep Won't Come...is well considered, sensitively played and leisurely."

-Courier Journal

"His clarion tone and muscular articulation represent the best in straight-ahead jazz."

- L.A. Jazz Scene
